

The 4th Annual

Environmental Leadership

Special Advertising Section

Wednesday, April 21, 2010 in The Washington Post

The daily Washington Post regularly reaches of legislative and executive branch leaders in Washington.

74%

No. 1

The Washington Post is read more, and washingtonpost.com is used more, than any other publication Web site among Washington leaders.

Deadlines:

Space: March 26
Materials: April 2
Publication: April 21

Communicate your message of environmental leadership in The Washington Post's special advertising-supported section on April 21.

This unique, broadsheet, stand-alone section will provide your organization the opportunity to reach Washington's political leadership as well as interested and active consumers via the market's largest single media vehicle. Be part of Environmental Leadership and convey to Washington your organization's role in finding solutions to our environmental challenges.

- Special, broadsheet stand-alone section.
- Featuring your environmental advertising message.
- Authors in prior editions of this special section include former President Bill Clinton, California Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, Senator Barbara Boxer, Archbishop Emeritus Desmond Tutu, and Utah Governor Jon Huntsman.

Contract rates apply. Discount rate available to non-contract advertisers.
Source: 2009 Washington Leadership Study, conducted by The Nielsen Company.

Washington Post Media

The Washington Post | washingtonpost.com | Express
El Tiempo Latino | washingtonpostmobile

Powerful Reach. Powerful Results.

To reserve your advertising space or for more information, please contact Ed Aduss at 202-334-5528 or adussel@washpost.com.